Good livestock farming practices make good sense.

New stock

insist on a health declaration, isolate and monitor new stock for a week.

Feed & water

purchase feed from quality assured suppliers, store to prevent contamination, keep water clean.

Feral animals & pests

work with neighbours to control feral animals and pests.

Vehicles & visitors

limit movement and access, be aware of potential contamination from visitors and vehicles.

If you spot unusual disease symptoms, abnormal behaviour or unexpected deaths in your stock, immediately call your veterinarian, stock inspector, or the Emergency Disease Hotline on 1800 675 888.

Look. Check. Ask a Vet.
